

All Conditional Offer Holders

19 March

In light of the unprecedented challenges learners are facing, the University of Chichester will be as flexible as it can in relation to applicants fulfilling the terms of their conditional offer.

The University recognises potential – in terms of the qualifications which you have already achieved, your predicted grades, and your tutor’s reference – and will take these factors into account where learning has been disrupted.

The University is awaiting further updates, in the coming days, from the government and OfQual on how qualifications may be awarded this summer. Depending on the outcome of those discussions, the University may choose to amend, or even waive, the academic conditions of your offer. We will let you know as soon as we are in a position to do so.

The University reserves the right to make independent academic decisions on each individual application.

Rest assured, the University is actively considering how to minimise disruption for you. We are also working hard to support our current students. Please await further updates from the University.

Please do not reply to this e-mail, we know you must be anxious but we will be in touch again as soon as we can.

Wishing you good health,

Bob Savill
