Negotiating gender in the football workplace: Composite vignettes of women head coaches career experiences

Dr Beth Clarkson is a Senior Lecturer in Sport Management and Development at the University of Portsmouth. Prior to joining the University in 2016, Beth had 13 years' experience coaching in elite youth football in the U.K., Europe and America, and holds a UEFA/FAW B License. Her passion for football continues, given she has been at the forefront of academic and media conversations about the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on women's football.

In 2020, Beth won the Celia Brackenridge International Research Award. Presented by the Anita White Foundation based at the University of Chichester, the Award aims to recognise and promote excellence in scholarship on child welfare in sport and/or women and sport. The late Professor Celia Brackenridge (an honorary of the University of Chichester) was a pioneer on the issue of child protection in sport through her research and campaigning, and she was given specific mention in the recently published Sheldon Report into child sexual abuse in football.
